

DR. EVANGELINE RAND. Adjunct Faculty Member, St. Stephen's Theological College, University of Alberta Campus, Edmonton, Canada is a Ph.D from Callifornia, USA, a certified Psychologist (P.A.No.1142) par excellence and Registered member of Canadian Health Service , Providers in Pshchology (No.04140). She has wide and varied experience in counselling and treatment, working with families and individuals from the crisis of disclosure, legal and prison "ordeals" long term counselling through to reconstituting of families, Adult Literacy Program at Alberta Vocational Centre. Evaluation of the program for severely disabled children, Learning theories.andHuman Development. She has been involved in Child Sexual Abuse treatment programmes and treatment of victoims programme of University of Alberta. She carried out Research in Women's Development and the Mythology of the Feminine: Dramatic, liturgical and ritual productions.

Her books Recovering Feminine Spirituality: The Mysteries and Mass as Symbols of Individuation, Sigo Press, Boston, 1995. Recovering from Incest: Imagination and the Healing Process, Sigo Press, Boston, 1989. Mary Magdalene, Carrier of the Grail: Ecstatic Love, Quantum Vision and publications Articles Symbolism, Health Psychology, and Playful Therapy, Alberta, Effective Observation for Educators. Available for ERIC/ECE College of Education, are very populatr ones in the field. She has many national and international Radio and Television appearances through her career and has given many popular lecture series.

Her latest book A Jasmine Journey contains the actual map and specific researched details of Jung's journey through India and Ceylon at a turning point in world history. Rand elaborates the often understated but enormous influence of Jung's lifelong relationship with India on the overall body of his work. This book's form constitutes a new genre of psychological commentary, interweaving as it does the author's personal and family history in India with the tracing of C.G. Jung's trip to India supported by archival and on-site research, written with rare passion with regard to the relationships among psyche, place, and time. Rand's work combines personal, historical and mythical research into a powerful psychic quest for our times. Her passion for India where she grew up as a child during colonial era reflects in her narratives and poetic presentation.

Evangelin Rand is a Visiting Faculty of CARE, teaching Counseling Psychology